

Pipe leaks in a rural, ranch-style home had been repaired but it seemed new leaks kept happening.

“Our experience with three previous slab leaks that had caused damage to the house and furnishings caused us to seek a new, long-term solution. We found it with CuraFlo from Brinks Services.”

Problem:

Sometimes homes with a lot of square footage built on a slab can have a pipe leak in one section now and another later on in a second section. Or a third. That was the experience of Mr. & Mrs. Bill Fritz. Their rural, two-story, ranch-style home had suffered through three previous pipe leaks. And they had an active leak again when they called Brinks. It could be heard hissing under the floor of the downstairs bathroom.

Solution:

“The Fritzes wanted us to guarantee we could stop the leak without having to jackhammer the floor,” states Bill Brink, owner of the company. “Other work on the site had been jackhammered through as much as six inches of cement, which is costly and time-consuming. A long-term solution was wanted; CuraFlo® has provided it. In fact, with CuraFlo we have a 25-year warranty for internal and external corrosion.”

Brinks technicians performed a diagnostic review, completed a valve system upgrade, and cleaned the interior of the pipes of the entire house with a pressurized abrasive airflow. Next, the Brinks team applied a tough epoxy lining that hardens in 45 minutes and allows full restoration of water service in as little as 5 hours. All without the inconvenience of the demolition, repair work and lengthy cleanup that the Fritzes had experienced with their three previous leaks.

After deciding to coat the pipes with epoxy, Fritz looked into three different proposals. “Brinks Services was the most knowledgeable and explained the process most clearly,” he said. “The results have been perfect – no problems.”
